My dear Parishioners,

Without telling her students that she was reading a scriptural parable, an elementary school teacher read the story of the vineyard owner and the hired laborers to her class. Afterward, she asked for their opinions. Invariably, the students labeled the vineyard owner's behavior as unfair. "He should pay each person what they earned!", they objected. Raised in a society that measures human worth by productivity and metes out rewards accordingly, the students were looking for justice, equal pay for equal work was what they expected. But the surprise of the parable (and it continues to be a surprise for adults as well) lies in the fact that the vineyard owner went beyond justice to extend his generosity to all laborers, even those who had come only at the eleventh hour. As a parable concerning the reign of God, Jesus' story makes two important points: (1) God's ways and thoughts (as represented by the vineyard owner) are far different from those of humankind; (2) participation in the reign of God is not determined by merit but by grace. Salvation is not earned, but is a free and generous gift for all who turn to God, whether in the morning of their lives or in their twilight years, or anywhere in between.

A closer scrutiny of this parable reveals several layers of meaning. In its original setting, during the ministry of Jesus, the parable represented Jesus' response to those who objected that he was overly attentive to those whom the self-righteous deemed as lost. Like the vineyard owner, i.e., God, Jesus continually reached out to invite all peoples to share in the reign of God. Notice how many times the vineyard owner went to the marketplace in search of laborers. Five times!

Sincerely,
Father Ed
